

Outreach across the province

Terrace residents provide valued feedback and ideas

With the room filled to capacity, First Nations elder Clifford Bolton and Terrace Mayor Jack Talstra welcomed the PCC to a Mayor's Dinner Oct. 11.

"Northern school children should have the opportunity to tour the Parliament Buildings."

- Lynne C, Terrace

Following presentations outlining the PCC's mandate and programs, guests provided valuable feedback and suggestions to improve their sense of connection to both the province's Capital and PCC programs.

Terrace Mayor Jack Talstra

Earlier in the day, the PCC contingent visited the Terrace studio of renowned First Nations artists Clifford and Rena Bolton, mother of Lt. Governor Stephen Point, then lunched with Bert Mercer, area First Nations economic development officer.

In the afternoon, PCC Outreach

"It is great to know that a group in Victoria took the time and made the effort to come to the Northwest."

- Elaine T, Terrace

Director Denis Johnston demonstrated educational initiatives to school district staff while the others toured Kitselas Canyon world heritage site, met artist Dempsey Bob and visited Terrace's Heritage Park Museum.

